DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

Claims 1-8 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention. These claim point to variables that are not explicitly defined, in terms of what they represent and how they are calculated. For instance independent claim 1 calls for a "constructing an exponential moving operator." Claim 3 attempts to provide this construction and states, in part, that the variable " $\upsilon$ " depends on a chosen interpolation scheme." The scope of the claim cannot be determined based on the indefinite choice of a scheme. Furthermore the variable that " $\upsilon$ " represents is not defined in the claims and cannot be discerned. Claim 3 also uses the variable  $\tau$ , which is not defined. Since this variable,  $\tau$ , is a part of the determination of variables  $\alpha$  and  $\mu$ , these variables are rendered indefinite also. It is not clear where these variables are pulled, or in other words, where a person of ordinary skill could look to provide a concrete value to these variables, for the purposes of calculation. For these reasons the claims are rendered indefinite.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 101

35 U.S.C. 101 reads as follows:

Art Unit: 3628

Whoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, may obtain a patent therefor, subject to the conditions and requirements of this title.

Claims 1-8 rejected under 35 U.S.C. 101 because the claimed invention is directed to non-statutory subject matter. The claimed invention as a whole must accomplish a practical application. That is, it must produce a "useful, concrete and tangible result." State Street, 149 F.3d at 1373, 47 USPQ2d at 1601-02. The purpose of this requirement is to limit patent protection to inventions that possess a certain level of "real world" value, as opposed to subject matter that represents nothing more than an idea or concept, or is simply a starting point for future investigation or research (Brenner v. Manson, 383 U.S. 519, 528-36, 148 USPQ 689, 693-96); In re Ziegler, 992, F.2d 1197, 1200-03, 26 USPQ2d 1600, 1603-06 (Fed. Cir. 1993)).

The second factor in this test for practical application is a determination of whether the claimed invention produces a concrete result. Usually, this question arises when a result cannot be assured. In other words, the process must have a result that can be substantially repeated. Note that the focus is on the result, not the steps themselves. Concrete data processing steps could still produce an unrepeatable result if the data being processed is subjective. However, the mere fact that the result is an estimate, prediction or other approximation that may not ultimately be found to be accurate is not a determinative factor for concreteness. Thus, an assured result refers to repeatability and ability to achieve a result rather than ultimate accuracy of the result. In the immediate instance, the calculation of the claimed invention, produces a result that may be useful and perhaps repeatable if variables are held constant, however it also appears to be the result of subjective processing, estimation or assumption of some factors in the data processing steps (Page 5, line 20-30; Page 6 lines 28-30; Page 15 line 30 – Page 16 line 3). The subjective choices could change the scope of the claims depending on the estimation method or interpolation method used in the process. Because the claims do not guarantee a concrete result, they are directed toward non-statutory subject matter.
